Thandeka Tutu-Gxashe

Nontombi Naomi Tutu

As one of the most revered men in South Africa and the world, Archbishop Desmond Tutu served as a spiritual leader during the powerful anti-apartheid movement in South Africa. Their father's dedication meant that Tutu's daughters, Thandeka Tutu-Gxashe and Nontombi Naomi Tutu, would spend many years growing up away from the volatile life in their homeland and a traditional home life with their father. The two sisters will share their perspective on lives as the daughters of a father who put his life on the line, the role their mother played, their lives away from South Africa, their experiences living in Europe and now in the American South, and their current activism inspired by one of South Africa's key freedom fighters.

Reception and Tour of Exhibit, From Apartheid to Democracy: The Freedom Struggle in South Africa and the American South, 6 PM / Conversation, 7:30 PM
